

This is a detailed topographic map of a mountainous region, likely in the Himalayas. The map features a large urban area in the center, characterized by a grid of yellow and blue highlighted zones. The yellow zones are primarily rectangular, suggesting planned urban blocks or industrial areas. The blue zones are more irregular, possibly representing water bodies or specific land use designations. The surrounding terrain is rugged, with numerous contour lines indicating steep slopes and high elevations. A river flows through the lower part of the map, and several roads and railways are visible, connecting the urban area to the surrounding regions. The map is densely populated with small text labels, likely identifying specific locations, landmarks, or administrative boundaries. The overall layout suggests a comprehensive planning or surveying document for a mountainous urban environment.
